

Using DermaWheat Antioxidant Skin Recovery Formula and Wheatgrass Skin Recovery Spray for Molluscum Contagiosum

Although there can not be a watertight guarantee, our Founder and Medical Adviser Dr. Chris Reynolds has had remarkable success treating molluscum contagiosum using his wheatgrass extract-based formula. You can view some amazing testimonials on our website www.drwheatgrass.com. Our products have worked well in most cases and we have increasing numbers of reports and testimonials from parents and therapists alike claiming them to be highly successful.

The main benefit of the treatment apart from its efficacy is that it is very safe and side effects, such as a little allergic reddening of the skin, are rare. If this does occur, simply stop the treatment for a week then resume with a once or twice daily application.

The aim is to rid the skin of the molluscum pox virus. The way this happens with wheatgrass is not known exactly but is believed to be due to stimulation of the skin's immunity which then assists the body to rid itself of the virus. This is quite a different approach to the traditional burning, squeezing, freezing and various other "treatment" modalities used. Our products are also markedly cheaper than the immuno-suppressant drug imiquimod (Aldara) which is recommended by some doctors for molluscum.

Please don't expect to see improvement overnight. It will more than likely take four to six weeks to see a definitive change for the better. Responses vary from person to person, so either or both products used together may be the best option. We have no explanation for this.

The directions are simple. Apply a small amount of either product to the spots twice daily if possible. It is not necessary to cover the surrounding skin. However, for large affected areas, the spray is much easier to apply, contains twice the volume and is therefore more economical than the Skin Recovery Formula.

We wish you well and sincerely hope that our DermaWheat products help clear up the molluscum. If it works for you or your child, a brief testimonial send via the email address below could help many others with this perplexing problem.

Thank you.

The Management Wheatgrass Pty. Ltd.

www.drwheatgrass.com

info@drwheatgrass.com.au